Ripple - David Schwartz

Ripple, the company, is not pursuing a "retail" use case for XRP. There are a lot of reasons for this but from my point of view, the biggest ones are the legal obstacles. See, for example:

<https://www.federalreserve.gov/bankinfo/regcecg.htm>

Other companies are, of course, free to pursue whatever use cases for XRP and Ripple's public ledger that they wish. XRP has sufficient value and liquidity to be used for many applications beyond the use cases Ripple is focusing on.

Compared to the other major cryptocurrencies, XRP provides faster confirmations, higher transaction volumes, and lower transaction costs. It doesn't support on-chain smart contracts like Ethereum does, but it does support a native distributed exchange, powerful cross-currency payments, token issuance, and sophisticated account and asset security features like native multisign, rotatable keys, and so on.

One big thing that we do lack is a robust ecosystem of developers working on a variety of different use cases.

About Community

I agree with all you're saying, but I think you're missing OP's point which is we're severely lacking wallets options. What do you advise big buyers who buy directly from Ripple to use as a wallet? Rippex, a random keypair generator on Github? I mean this is not serious and I'm sure it's holding back small or big investors. Hopefully this will be better when Bitgo will be released.

If you are saying they are not pursuing retail use, then what the point of selling them freely on exchanges?

Edit: And I do agree that XRP surpasses many crypto-currencies in many ways, and that is why I truly believe in it. But when I see that market is getting red again, I am trying to think - ok, what could be done by community, so we would not be affected by negative trend. And this is where it comes, that options are limited. Because I have dependencies like exchanges and there is not much I can do, as some potential users are trying to verify the account.

If we have 14K users in here, I believe there could be 5-8 guys, who can build a decent wallet on all platforms (verified by Ripple). I would be happy to donate if such initiative arises

Why doesn't Ripple Labs offer a bounty for app developers to make XRP apps? You've got that big war chest, this seems like a strategic use of it.

Hi Joel, is there a list somewhere that lists current projects developing apps and use cases with Ripple as the platform? Thanks

Ripple is being short sighted, or Joel, but without retail you will never have the liquidity necessary for XRP to be used as an intermediary-currency. This has 5000 years of recorded commerce backing it. Now given "liquidity" is where the real win is - or essentially, Ripple will forever be limit bound to a market cap similar to that of SWIFT give or take 100-200%. As XRP will be valueless aka an unused artifact of a technology never utilized - which ultimately had the most leverage...

Joel, sorry are you a director of Ripple making public guidance statements and decisions or a dev that likes to interact with the community - I'm confused? Because for an enterprise level billion dollar technology to have a Public representative (PR) person selected to make these statements off the cuff is ridiculous. Unless the CEO of Ripple is willing to make this statement on twitter it is incongruent and misleading. Why aren't developers at Morgan Stanley publicly discussing their absolute views on what the company is or isn't doing?

Explain to me, just how, what you have stated:

1. improves the DR (Decentralization Rate) and helps in becoming more decentralized than Bitcoin - as stated by Ripple management...
2. Or adds to the future liquidity of Ripple?

With both being critical to the success of Ripples future.

"Because US dollars have a banking "Use Case" we are not pursuing retail. We have no need for retail customers to hold US dollars and nor are we pursuing it..."

Ummm wrong. Sorry man but if citizens stopped accepting US dollars it would be a disaster, much like that of XRP. -- Period.

You might as well tweet out on Ripple twitter, "It is our hope at Ripple that any non-Institutional holder or XRP sells all XRP holdings by August 01, 2017" - which is not the case at all. So just let it be.

Ripple and WEF connection and CBDC

Hello,

This topic is the most disturbing thing in XRP and Ripple especially.

They are WEF partners. We all know the WEF is pro evil agenda (you own nothing but be happy - we own instead of you, depopulation, carbon credit measuring, climate hysteria etc).

Do you think it is good that the switch is turned on?

Do you think it is worth all the money that we lose our freedoms and become digital slaves to AI?
